Water for West Liberty

A WPA project for water works and a sewer system for West Liberty has been approved at Washington and signed by the President.

The present town board is the third board which has worked on this matter. The plans now approved are entirely new and more elaborate than any previously made and submitted.

The City of West Liberty owns its water distributing system. At present our only source of supply is a six inch bored well which belongs to the county. The supply is woefully inadequate and it has become ever more difficult to furnish water to those who are dependent entirely on this source of supply.

The system now approved and which will be installed by the WPA commencing as soon as the projects have cleared the various changes will take its water from the Licking River. The supply is unfailing. Water will be purified and delivered from a storage tank with an elevation of about 200 feet above the main part of the city and about 300 feet above the Licking River at the intake.

The projects were prepared under the guidance and with the advice of the State Board of Health and the State Actuarial Bureau and are fully accredited both as to the quality of the water for household use and the quantity for fire protection.

Some forty fire hydrants will be installed, giving access to every property within the town limits.

The surveys both for the water works and sewer system are very complete and will be accessible to every resident within the town limits.

The use of the city water or the sewer system is of course entirely optional with the citizens. All water will be metered and each consumer charged for the water he uses. By using the town sewer system residents may clean up their premises and save the remaining open wells for perhaps indefinite use.

The town board has arranged to finance the town's share of the cost of these projects by the issue of revenue bonds, to be redeemed over a period of twenty or thirty years from the revenue earned by the plant. The bonds will not be a lien on any man's home nor affect his town tax. They are a lien on the water and sewer plants only and will be paid for from revenue received from these plants.

Many details, both of construction and final operation of the plants, remain to be worked out. The town board earnestly asks for the assistance and cooperation of all citizens. Members of the town board serve without pay and are giving much of their time and energy to this permanent improvement. Every progressive citizen, and we all want to be that kind, will want to do something to help this good cause.

The regular town board meetings are on the first Tuesday evening of each month, but adjourned meetings will no doubt be held rather frequently for some time to come. Information on any subject in connection with these projects, or any other matter of town government, may be had by attending any meetings and making your requests known or by consulting the board's attorney, J. Blaine Nickell.

FARMERS' COLUMN

THE FARM AND HOME

To keep nut kernels from becoming rancid, keep them in an airtight container in a cool, dry place away from light. The flavor of nuts is largely dependent on the oils they contain, and these oils must be kept from becoming rancid.

Cheaper and cleaner eggs are produced if the flock is confined until 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and all day when the weather is bad. A warm moist mash fed about noon each day encourages production. Three pounds per 100 hens is sufficient.

No. 14 wire was once used almost exclusively for residence branch circuits, but owing to the increasing variety of electrical appliances used in the home, No. 12 wire is recommended. Ranges, water heaters and some motors require larger wires.

November and December are preferred over spring for setting peach trees, although spring planting does well in most years. Buy either year-old peach trees or June buds, and never accept two or three-year-old trees.

A stove usually represents a long-time investment. Therefore, it pays to buy the best material, the best design and the best construction that one can afford, in order to get dividends in the form of long service and efficient performance.

An apple is nearly always an acceptable addition to the school lunch. The growing boy or girl also will welcome hot cocoa or milk in a thermos bottle. Salads or puddings may be placed in small jars and carried conveniently.

COUNTRY LIFE CONFERENCE

The American Country Life Association, a national organization of persons and groups working for better conditions in country life, will hold its annual meeting at the University November 2-4. Last year the meeting was at Manhattan, Kansas, and the year before at Kalamazoo, Michigan.

Open to all interested persons and attracting attendance from many states, these annual meetings provide a forum of discussion of all kinds of problems in rural improvement, including such questions as low farm income, tenancy, farm labor, interdependence of rural and urban families, and relations of producers and consumers.

Speakers this year include President William J. Hutchins of Berea College; C. E. Breher, director of agricultural extension work in Tennessee; Murray D. Lincoln of the Ohio Farm Bureau; President Frank L. McVey of the University of Kentucky; David Donoho of Breathitt county, and several nationally known educators, sociologists and economists from other states and from the United States Department of Agriculture and Farm Security Administration. There will be special sections of the Youth Section of the association; also a National Rural Home Conference, and meetings of the National Home Demonstration Council, held in connection with the general program. All sessions will be open to the public, and many educators, pastors, teachers, social workers, county farm and home agents, farm leaders and members of homemakers' clubs will attend.

WAY TO BETTER CROPS

Tests made by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station in a field near Greenville reveal comparatively simple and in-expensive ways to build fertility, and give to farmers in the Western Coal Fields region of the state the cue to improved crop yields.

Taking over 25 years ago badly depleted and almost wholly unproductive land, the experimenters found that applications of limestone and superphosphate worked like magic in boosting crop yields. Properly placed in rotations of crops common to the region, these materials increased the yield of corn an average of 26 bushels to 46 bushels, wheat from an average of 5 bushels to 19 bushels, and clover hay from three-quarters of a ton to a ton and a half.

Increased production per acre for one year was worth $8 to $12 an acre, and single applications of limestone and superphosphate continue to increase yields for several years.

Since the use of limestone and superphosphate almost double grain yields, farmers now can drop only their best land, and devote the less productive parts of their farms to the growing of hay and grass; and in the past few years, largely as a result of these experiments, thousands of acres in the region have been seeded to legumes and grasses.

The value of the Greenville experiments are also being reflected in the greatly increased use of limestone throughout the Western Coal Fields, which include Muhlenberg, Hopkins, McLean, Ohio, Butler and parts of Todd, Christian, Logan, Webster and other counties.

WASHINGTON NOTES

WLW

The Crosley Radio Corporation's 500-Kilowatt Station, WLW, has been operating since 1934 under an experimental license while other stations in the country have been limited to 50 Kilowatts. The application of the Crosley Company to continue its super-power commercial broadcasts has been rejected by three of the seven members of the Federal Communication Commission. The reasons were interference with Station WOR, Newark, N. J., which is a clear channel station, and interference with the advertising support of other stations within the area served by WLW. The Commission, thru its committee, pointed out that the Crosley station had a net income last year of $702,954.61, which was nearly seventy per cent of the original cost of all property devoted to the broadcasting service.

WOMEN WORKERS

Women workers hold one-fourth of the account numbers issued by the Social Security Board. The Board's analysis was based upon a ten per cent sample of more than 36,000,000 applications for account numbers. It pointed out that in the 1930 census, women constituted only twenty per cent of the fully employed population. The larger representation of women was especially noticeable in the younger age group 20-24 years old, nearly two out of five are women.

LEWIS AND GREEN

The proposal advanced by John Lewis that he and William Green resign as C. I. O. Chairman and A. F. of L. President, respectively, to help toward labor peace, is complicated by the fact that Mr. Lewis draws his salary as a union official and not as chairman of the C. I. O. Mr. Green, on the other hand, gets his salary from the A. F. of L., which recently elected him President.

Gold imports into the United States in September set a record at $520,907,282. The previous record was $452,000,000 in February, 1934. The influx was attributed to the threat of war in Europe. Exports sent the greatest amount, $37,086,236.

INVESTMENTS

Investments by citizens in foreign countries at the end of 1937 totaled almost $12,000,000,000, according to a report of the Department of Commerce. Foreign investments in the United States amounted to about $7,000,000,000. American investments abroad include $3,630,000,000 in Canada and Newfoundland, $2,562,000,000 in South America, and $2,372,000,000 in Europe.

PHILIPPINES

Vice-President Sergio Osmeña, of the Philippine Government, is on his way to the United States to assist in formulating legislation to change the independence plans for the islands. Calling his mission one of "transcendental importance to the welfare of the Filipino people," Mr. Osmeña says he fully realizes that in view of conditions in the United States, faces a task that is most difficult. Under the Tydings-McDuffie Act, the Philippines are to be complete independence in 1946, at the end of a ten-year transition period. A joint committee of Filipinos and Americans are working out a specific program for the islands after 1946, but its deliberations have been clouded by the recent aggressive moves of Japan toward China, with the result that the suggestion has been made that the American flag be kept in the islands beyond 1946.

SPEAKERS

Former President Hoover, Alf Landon, the Republican presidential candidate in 1936, and Col. Frank Knox, his running mate, head a group of Republican speakers that are intensifying the campaign of the Republican National Committee in "every state north of the Potomac and west of the Ohio." The party wants to elect congressmen and governors as "the way to establish economic recovery."

UPTURN

President Roosevelt's popularity made a sharp upturn in the belated survey of public opinion, conducted by the Institute of Public Opinion early this month. The latest index records the President with 59.8 per cent of the major party vote, as compared with 55.2 on September 18. On election day, 1936, Mr. Roosevelt polled 52.4 per cent of the vote. The increased popularity of the President is attributed to his action in appealing to Chancellor Hitler and other European leaders for a peaceful settlement of the Sudeten dispute.

MARKETING QUOTAS INFORMATION CLOSED OCTOBER 26

Last week we had an article in the paper giving meeting dates for meetings for farmers to give information relative to the amount of tobacco they sold in 1935, 1936, and 1937.

The best information we can get from these meetings something like 75 per cent of the farmers growing tobacco this year are reporting at these meetings with the information asked for. Unless the remaining 25 per cent furnish this office with the amount of tobacco that they have marketed in the years 1935, 1936, and 1937 they will not get a marketing card with which to market tobacco with when the tobacco season opens up.

According to the law under which the tobacco marketing quotas operate, a farmer will have to pay tax on tobacco that he sells unless he gets a marketing card. For this reason we cannot urge too much the importance of each farmer growing tobacco this year reporting at once the amount of tobacco he marketed on his farm in the years 1935, 1936, and 1937.

Report at once your sales of tobacco in the years 1935, 1936, and 1937 and if possible bring your warehouse bills.

This office is doing everything possible to assist farmers in getting the marketing quotas on time. We are afraid, however, that a few farmers do not realize the importance of cooperating in this matter. We will be unable to help you unless you supply this office with the information asked for.

We have set aside time to take care of this work now but any farmer reporting to this office for the purpose of giving this information after October 26 will not only be delayed in getting his marketing card, but will not be able to sell his tobacco when he desires. YANDAL WRATHER, County Agent.

BOB JONES' COMMENTS

We read in the Bible about a rich man who had a great harvest. He tore down his old barns and built new ones. He folded his hands and told his soul to take its ease and that night the fool died. What a hard time that man had. First, he had a hard time accumulating something. Second, he had a hard time saving what he had accumulated. Third, he had a hard time trying to convince himself that what he had accumulated could satisfy his soul.

This story of the rich fool reads like current literature. Men "tug and toil" to save something. After they have saved it they are worried to death for fear they will lose it and most of them usually do. It is not as hard to make money and save money as it is to satisfy the heart with material things. Man is an immortal being. He has got to live somewhere forever. Material things cannot satisfy his soul. The rich fool said, "my soul eat." Think of the soul eating a barn, and grain, and land, and stocks, and bonds. God made man. He knows what and of bread the soul needs. Jesus said, "I am the Bread come down from heaven." The hungry hearts of earth's teeming millions whether they know it or not are crying for the Bread of Life.

Many theologians in our modern world refuse to believe the doctrine of "original sin." They talk much of the divinity of human nature. Some say that man was neither born good or bad. The Bible teaches that man was born in sin. While these theologians are talking about not believing in "original sin" and depravity, the people are trying themselves to invent "original sins." All of these practices such as wild cocktail parties, sensational divorces, affluities and other shocking things are not original with the people who are doing them. Vices like these have always been the cause of the overthrow of empires, the wrecking of civilizations and the destruction of people. There is one game that no man has ever been able to beat. That is the game of sin. Deterioration and disintegration have already set in America and all the countries of the world. Sin is never constructive. It is always destructive. It never pays. It always produces bankruptcy. It never lifts up. It always pulls down. It never produces life. "The wages of sin is death." The statesmen of the world are endeavoring to hold up the house of civilization but it is about to fall. Sin has produced the moral termities that are eating up the foundation upon which we have built our civilization.

Gypsy Moths Destructive
Gypsy moths, so destructive to foliage, were turned loose in Massachusetts more than 60 years ago, when a storm tore open a packing case containing a quantity of these moths that were being used in silk-worm experiments.

The receipts of the Renfro Valley Barn Dance program amounted to $596.18.

CHAPEL PROGRAM

The regular chapel program was given on Friday of last week and was presented by the Sophomore 2 under the sponsorship of Mr. Benton.

Rev. Martin led the devotional. Mr. Benton introduced Dr. Black, head of the mathematics and physics department of Morehead State Teachers' College, who was guest speaker. Dr. Black's subject was, "Changing Frontiers" in which he expressed many important ideas.

He expressed the thought that the English speaking nations are losing power because they are not leaders in the air. England and the United States have always been closely allied and if England loses power, we must depend on our own initiative if we are to remain an important world power.

All the important machinery of the present age, including modern warfare implements, is the result of the mathematical knowledge of someone.

Our future depends upon technical minded people and Dr. Black illustrated how mathematics and physics help to train minds to think accurately.

"We are in the machine age and are going to stay," said Dr. Black, "and as bad as we hate it, if war with modern methods of warfare must come, I want my sons to be able to protect themselves. The nation that survives will be the one who has the best trained citizens."

We were pleased to have Dr. Black as speaker who came at no expense to the school or sponsor.

HEALTH NOTES

It is a saying among lawyers that one cannot seek the aid of a court of equity unless he has clean hands. I have been in a good many rural schools in this county, and there have been very few in which I found any soap, or other facilities for making the hands clean.

I wonder which children get, law or equity, when they eat their lunches with dirty hands. Perhaps it is the law of nature to be oblivious to dirt, but the equity of good health procedure enjoins such a degree of criminal negligence towards our bodies.

Dr. Whiteaker tells me that he has sometimes found people who were indignant when he asked for a soap and a clean towel. Was he too good to wipe on the same towel everyone else was used to using? Of course not. Dr. Whiteaker isn't too good to wash his hands in the "branch" and wipe them on a burlap sack; the reason he wanted a clean towel was so that he could serve the patient better—so that he could better protect the prospective mother against the dangers of infection.

Here again in the attitude of these people we see at work the most terrible of all the diseases that afflict the human race—ignorance. Ignorance it is that causes us to suffer so much from all other diseases. It is ignorance that causes our maternal mortality, ignorance that causes most of our infant mortality, and ignorance that is responsible for the continuance in our midst of a good many of the communicable diseases. Clearly it is ignorance and its emotional defense-mechanism, false modesty that causes us to cling to such diseases as gonorrhea and syphilis.

I would venture to say that ignorance is responsible for most of the troubles of this world, and drive the matter home by showing that the generally prevailing ignorance of the people concerning the causes of war and aggression is responsible for our continuing to permit these evils. We might even go so far as to say that our general ignorance concerning the problems of distribution created by the advent of the machine age is responsible for the miserable spectacle of mass poverty and unemployment alongside of a greatly increased productive capacity.

Yes, ignorance is the worst of diseases. I was very gratified today at Goad Ridge School, to hear the first man who met of his own thoughts correctly answered by question: "What is the worst disease in the world." He said it was "Dumbness." And that, after all, is pretty close to ignorance isn't it?

One tragic aspect of our health program is that it has not yet reached enough of the people. Just today, a child died of a disease which we know perfectly well how to prevent: diphtheria. We can only blame ourselves for not having brought our message of PREVENTIVE MEDICINE effectively into their home. We grieve with the bereaved parents and make their sorrow our own, for there is no anguish like that of losing a child through our own shortcomings in not giving it the protection it deserved.—DR. WALLACE BYRD.

One Summer's Night

By SARAH E. McCAHEY
© McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNC Service.

"I DON'T understand why it is, but you seem to have the coolest breezes on your piazza for the last three nights—I'm coming over." And the man across the way crossed the street and sat down on the piazza steps of his neighbor and began talking.

"A year that can boast an eclipse, an earthquake, and a full week of torrid weather like this in June makes what I might call a crowded year, so far. More things have happened this year to drive people out of their homes than ever before. We've been east in utter darkness, our homes have trembled over our heads and now we're being boiled."

"You're a cheerful cuss to have around on a night like this! Can't you think up some other pleasant little thing to liven things up a bit?" Mr. Reddy was good-naturedly sarcastic.

"It's so hot in New York that the traffic cops are sinking up to their ankles in the melted asphalt. They couldn't make an arrest if they wanted to."

"Go on—go on—you're doing fine—give us an encore."

"Look at everybody around here out on their piazzas dodging the automobile lights going by—don't wonder the poor things don't want to be shown up—haven't much on—most of them. The city should water the streets on a night like this and keep the 'kiddie coolers' going night and day—what's the matter with giving the old man a shower once in a while? We're paying for it!"

"Why don't you buy a little ocean for yourself so's you could have any time you pleased?" asked Mr. Reddy mildly.

"Tell you what—" began the neighbor, but Mr. Reddy broke in. "Got to get a match—"

"Tell you what," began the neighbor again when Mr. Reddy returned a few minutes later; but just then his wife excitedly called to him from across the way.

"A policeman just telephoned he found your store opened—said you'd better go down."

"What'd I tell you? Burglary! It lacked just that to make up a full quota of calamities! Five miles on a night like this on a Toonerville trolley—Can you beat it?"

"I hope no one has broken into his store," said Mrs. Reddy, sympathetically, coming out and handing her husband a cool drink that tinkled.

"Don't fret," said her husband after he had quaffed his drink, and he smiled a little, "that feller's spoiled my piazza for the last time."

"You don't mean that you—"

"I do and I did!" said Mr. Reddy, defiantly. "It's no worse for him than he's made it for me for three nights—torrid nights like this!"

From the garden floated voices— young, cool, ladylike voices. His little daughter was entertaining.

"I think you have the finest dad!" gushed a happy voice.

"I think so, too," laughed his daughter. "He's the best pal ever!"

"If I had a dad like him I'd never want to leave him."

"I'm never going to," said Sixteen. "When he has made enough money we're going to travel all over the world together and see all there is to be seen."

As the cool sweet voice of his daughter trickled soothingly to his ears, suddenly "dad" found himself transported to the faraway North wandering through a region of icy coldness. In a little while he had discovered a hitherto unknown and unsuspected little principality ruled by a king—and he was the king.

He presently found himself reclining on a luxurious polar bear rug thrown carelessly over the edge of an iceberg which was magnificently riding the waves. Stalactites of crystal ice hung pendant above and all around him and perfumed breezes fanned his brow. He sighed contentedly and named his little kingdom "Blissovania."

But the waters suddenly got rough. What a jolt. His iceberg must have struck a snag—heard the clamor.

But it was the familiar voice of his neighbor that had shattered his dream.

"That fool cop phoned the wrong man and I'll tell that captain a thing or two in the morning—everything shut up tight and me checking up for two hours with the thermometer at a hundred. The whole city's hanging over the fire escapes and down the streets sizzling."

The return of the king of Blissovania was startlingly abrupt and somewhat confusing. He blinked woozily over the piazza rail at the returned perspiring figure of the destroyer of his little kingdom, and half way between the land of his birth and his newly discovered country his wrath broke forth.

"Get outa here, you animated torrid wave—you piazza spoiler!—toss off my iceberg and keep outa my country!"
